EXTENSION WORK IS STOPPED

RAPID TRANSIT COMPANY PAYS OFF ITS MEN.

"Right of Way" the Obstacle That Prevents Construction Work From Being Rushed to Completion.

Great hopes on the part of both Ogden and Huntsville and, in fact, the inhabitants of all Weber county were entertained in the prospective building of the extension of the Rapid Transit railway through Ogden canyon. It has been very plain to all that the completion of that little bit of road would mean much to the development of the country from both ways.

The work of extending the road has been prosecuted as vigorously as possible during the winter months, and it has been the intention of the company to more vigorously push the building as soon as the weather would permit. Fifty men have been at work during the bad weather, and arrangements were being made to double the force as soon as the frost left the ground so as to enable the company to do the grading work.

While the company had not secured a right of way over the entire distance of the road between Ogden and Huntsville, they had secured enough to warrant them in beginning building operations. They felt assured that there would be no trouble in securing the right of way through Huntsville where they were ready to build over the premises of parties who had not yet given a right of way. But in arranging for further work as the spring approaches they found that some of the parties owning property over which the road would necessarily have to pass wanted exorbitant prices for the right of way, such prices as the company does not care to pay, hence the further construction of the road has been called off.

Engineer Joseph West stated last evening that the workmen had all been paid off and the work suspended for the present, and that the suspension of operations likely would be for an indefinite length of time unless reasonable concession for the right of way should be made by property owners along the survey of the road.

If this road is not built, the canyon this year it will be a great loss to the people. The farmers of the upper valley will be deprived of transportation facilities much desired, the sugar beet acreage in the upper valley will be materially lessened and when the visitors of the Grand Army of the Republic come here this summer there will not be adequate transportation facilities to carry them through the beautiful Ogden canyon to the picturesque valley above. The construction work of the road was in hand when the blanket of curtailment was thrown over it by virtue of the vexed question of "right of way."

PROHIBITION BILL RECEIVES QUIETUS

Entire Day Consumed in Ravings and Wranglings Over Measure—Senator Kuchler Votes Against the Bill in Committee, Prepared Minority Report with Himself as Minority and Moved Acceptance by the Body—Nearly Every Man in the Senate Entered Into Debate—Largest Audience Present During Session.

Yesterday was the biggest day so far in the history of the Utah state senate during the present session. The Cannon prohibition bill received its quietus but not until the entire day had been consumed in so deciding.

The morning session opened at 10 o'clock in the morning and until nearly 5 o'clock in the afternoon the senators raved and wrangled and talked over the measure. About 4 o'clock a vote was taken on the majority report on the bill by the committee on commerce and manufactures, and a tally showed that 12 votes had been cast against the measure, with 5 senators for it.

Senator Rudolph Kuchler himself the chairman of the committee on commerce and manufactures, had at least the courage of his convictions. Not only did he vote against the bill in the committee, but he even prepared a minority report with himself as the minority, and moved its acceptance by the body.

The largest audience during the session gathered to listen to the debate, during which nearly every man in the house took occasion to express his views. The matter finally went to a vote, after which Senator Burton changed his vote and moved to reconsider the matter on Tuesday next.

The house also got busy yesterday and held a session which was active while it lasted. The senate bill No. 21, imposing death upon any convict who, in attempting to escape, should injure a guard or fellow convict, was passed after some lively discussion. In this case, too, nearly the entire house went on record and a number of amendments were passed from time to time in connection with the bill. These all failed to pass, however, and on the vote the measure went through in nearly its original form.

Monday being Washington's birthday, no sessions of either house will be held.

Bills Introduced in the House.

House Bill No. 201.—An act amending section 7203, 7204, 7205, 7206, 7207, 7208, 7209, 7210, 7211, 7212, 7213, 7214, 7215, 7216, 7217, compiled laws of Utah, 1907, relating to juvenile courts, terms of duties, appointments of judges and officers, as substitute for House Bill No. 22, by Ashton. By the judiciary committee.

ATTENDED ENDORSED BIG STOCK MEETING SALT LAKE MEETING

CATTLE OWNERS OF WYOMING OPPOSE WOOL GROWERS.

Strife Quite Serious in Possibilities—Forest Officials Explain Conditions to Stockmen.

Assistant Chief of Grazing A. C. McCain has returned from a trip into Wyoming, where he attended a big stock meeting at Big Piney. He was accompanied upon his return by Forest Supervisor John Raphael of the Wyoming forest near Afton. Mr. Raphael has been detained for six weeks duty at the district offices.

The gentlemen state that the stock meeting which they attended was composed wholly of cattle owners, that section of the state of Wyoming being the center of much of the opposition to the sheep companies—a strife which has flourished for many years and, at times, has become quite serious in its possibilities.

The cattle men have always contended that the sheep interests had no right to invade the cattle range east of the mountains in that section and have been extremely bitter to their efforts to keep sheep off the range. The result has been that, with the exception of a few thousand in the southern districts, very few sheep are owned in the vicinity of Big Piney.

Since the Wyoming forest was set aside and placed under the supervision of the Forest Service, the cattle men of Wyoming, who have heretofore used the range on the east side, have not had a very clear understanding of the real intents and purposes of the new forest regulations and were inclined to think that the government has practically shut them out of that section of grazing land. The meeting was for the purpose of getting together on the subject and giving the forest officials an opportunity to present the true facts in the case and explain away the various ideas of opposition. About thirty stock men were present and the meeting was a success in every way.

AMERICANIZED JEWS SHOULD BE PROTECTED.

Seattle, Feb. 20.—"I regret that I was obliged to conceal the fact of my acceptance of citizenship in America," said Rabbi H. Genns of Seattle, "to have done otherwise would have been suicidal. I do not know what would have happened under the circumstances. It is an astonishing fact that a Jew born in Russia can not accept citizenship in any other land, and if he does so, he can not, when he returns to his native land, appeal to that citizenship for protection against persecution. That phase of the matter should be made a subject of diplomatic correspondence between the two governments."

LOCAL WOOLGROWERS DISCUSS ACTION IN ALL PHASES.

Contemplated Bill to Be Presented to Legislature Occupies Entire Session of Ogden Association.

At the office of the Utah Woolgrowers' association in Salt Lake Friday night an important meeting was held for the purpose of looking into matters looking to the better protection of the sheep and cattle on the public ranges of Utah. Prominent sheepmen and cattlemen of the state, together with members of the senate committee on forests and forestry, as substitute for House Bill No. 22, by Ashton. By the judiciary committee.

The meeting was a harmonious one and it was agreed by all present that a bill should be framed and presented to the legislature providing for a tax of 2 mills for sheepmen on each head of stock owned, to raise a fund with which to pay bounties on predatory wild animals that are so destructive to the flocks and herds in the state at certain periods of the year. According to an enumeration of the livestock of the state, this tax would raise a fund of $25,000 to $30,000. To this amount will be added the expected appropriation of $10,000 by the legislature, and a like sum from the national government, which in all would aggregate $50,000 to be utilized in the state in the paying of bounties on these animals. It was finally concluded by the members of the conference that the bounties to be paid should be $250 for coyotes, bobcats and lynx, $10 for wolves, bears and mountain lion.

Those who attended the meeting Friday night were:

J. H. Seely, vice president of the Utah Woolgrowers' association and chairman of the senate committee on forests and forestry, R. W. Seely, of the committee; John N. Henrie, chairman of the house committee on livestock; Representatives A. F. Haycock and John M. Murdoch, and the following prominent sheep and cattlemen: C. B. Stewart of Salt Lake City, secretary of the Utah Woolgrowers' association, A. W. Crane of Herriman, Mr. Benson of Tooele county, Ben T. Brown of Wayne county, Freeman Bigby, A. A. Callister and Thomas Jones of Salt Lake City, Hyrum McFarland of Ogden, J. R. Allen of Draper, F. B. Kesler of Beaver, and L. R. Anderson of Manti.

At the meeting of the Ogden Woolgrowers' association, yesterday afternoon, the action of the meeting in Salt Lake Friday night was thoroughly discussed in all of its phases and it was the unanimous voice of the meeting that the conclusions arrived at and advocated by the stockmen and the members of the legislature who took part in the Salt Lake meeting are correct, and that the policy advocated should be endorsed by all the stock raisers of the state. The association passed a resolution endorsing the plan designated, and pledging the association to an earnest and undivided support of the same, was passed. It developed in the Ogden meeting of the woolgrowers that the cattle, horse and sheepmen of Utah in past years have lost fully one million dollars per annum by virtue of the devastations of predatory animals in the killing of stock, hence the stockraisers can well afford to pay $30,000 by way of bounties for the destruction of such animals.

The contemplated bounty bill will soon be framed and presented to the state solons for their consideration, and it is confidently expected by the stockmen that it will meet no opposition in the legislature. The proposed bounty bill occupied all the time of the Ogden woolgrowers at their meeting yesterday, notwithstanding the fact that they are much concerned over the promotion of the work for the arrangements for the national woolgrowers' convention to be held in Ogden next year.

POSTAL SAVINGS BANK BILL MAY PASS

Washington, Feb. 20.—The postal savings bank bill, after having been opposed for many weeks, although it has been the unfinished business of the senate, may yet be passed at the present session. The unexpected progress which was made with the appropriation bills yesterday, it is said, will give Senator Carter an opportunity to again press the postal savings bank measure, and it is said with a number of amendments, it can be put in shape, where it would be acceptable.

In the short time that remains of the present session, it is not thought possible to get the bill through the house, but it is argued that passage by the senate would be an important step toward redeeming the promise made by the Republican national committee to enact the legislation.

RELIGION AND DEMOCRACY

On Wednesday evening, February 24, at the Congregational church, William Thurston Brown will give the concluding lecture of the Walt Whitman series. This address will be patriotic in the true sense, an exposition of Whitman's great thought of democracy as the expression of truly religious life. When Whitman said, "Religion must enter into the life of the nation—must make the nation," he evidently had in mind religion as Mr. Brown defines it, as "a consciousness of God in the soul of man." And when he said, "Affection shall solve the problems of freedom yet, those who love each other shall become invincible—they shall yet make Columbia victorious," he declared his faith in the new commandment—in which we all profess a belief—of love one to another.

Whitman's belief in this love of comrades is not only the cornerstone but the material of the whole structure of democracy is thus set forth in the opening lines of "Leaves of Grass": "Come, I will make the continent indivisible."

"I will make the most splendid race the sun ever yet shown upon; 'I will make divine magnets—lands. 'With the love of comrades. 'With the life-long love of comrades.' When it is remembered that Whitman personally ministered to a hundred thousand sick and wounded soldiers, Union and Confederate, during the Civil war, it will be conceded that he understands the meaning of the word 'comrade,' and that his thought of this nation as a nation of comrades is the greatest possible ideal of democracy."

If you would think of your country as the prophetic soul of Whitman saw it, as "The institution of the dear love of comrades," hear Mr. Brown's clear and forceful elucidation of Whitman's thought in the lecture, "Religion and Democracy."
